The FLRA Proposes Revisions to its Privacy Act Regulations.

Today, the Federal Labor Relations Authority (the FLRA) proposed revisions to its Privacy Act regulations. The proposed regulations centralize the intake and processing of Privacy Act requests for records related to work performed by the three-member Authority component, the Office of General Counsel, and the Federal Service Impasses Panel with the Office of the Solicitor. The Office of the Inspector General will continue to process Privacy Act requests for records related to work performed by the Inspector General's office. The proposed regulations also streamline and update procedures for a request, such as procedures for accountings of record disclosures.

The FLRA welcomes comments on the proposed rule. Comments must be received on or before November 13, 2023. The Federal Register Notice includes instructions for submitting comments.
